

Identify Your Values

Our values impact all facets of our lives and the many roles we play (e.g., friend, partner, parent, employee, manager). Values shape the goals that are important to us, our behaviours, and the manner in which we interact with others. Values change over the course of our lifetimes, and may even differ between our various roles and responsibilities. The priorities we place on different values also vary over time.

It can be helpful to identify the workplace values that are presently important to you, and to contemplate how they relate to your goals as a manager. Articulating your core values can help you to identify your goals and understand your behaviours. It can also serve as a valuable frame of reference for those inevitable times when you may begin to slip away from the values you hold dear.

Read through the following values and circle those that are most important to you at the present moment. For each of the values you circle, identify why it is important to you in your current role.

Value (circle those that are most important to you)	I value this in my role because....
Acceptance
Accuracy
Achievement
Authority
Autonomy
Caring
Challenge
Comfort
Commitment
Compassion
Contribution
Cooperation

Courtesy
Creativity
Dependability
Duty
Family
Flexibility
Forgiveness
Friendship
Fun
Genuineness
Growth
Honesty
Humour
Independence
Industry
Justice
Knowledge
Mastery
Openness
Order
Power
Purpose
Rationality

Responsibility
Safety
Self-control
Stability
Tolerance

Place an asterisk (*) next to any values you would like to develop or strengthen even further. How might you do this? Be specific.

- 1.
- 2.
- 3.
- 4.
- 5.

I commit to actively continuing to strengthen my workplace values. I will conduct the first stage of this process during the following period:

_____ (start date)
_____ (end date)